Dear Mr. Amory:

I wanted to tell you again how much we enjoyed your talk to my American Military Policy seminar last Monday. As usual, you laid the problem on the line and dissected it in a way no amount of reading or class discussion could have done.

Not only was a blow struck for the cause of educating people about the function of intelligence, but the stock of CIA has had a notable rise in the eyes of the students -- some of whom are present or potential members of the "community." So I like to think there may be some return on the time you invested.

It was very good of you to do it, and your kindness is much appreciated by all of us.

Sincerely,

Timothy W. Stanley
